Hops to Russian City Despite Poor Weather

SOLDIN, BRANDENBURG PROVINCE, Germany, July 17.—Captain Stephen Darius and Stanley T. Girenus, native Lithuanian residents of Chicago who set out from New York Saturday morning to fly non-stop to Kaunas, Lithuania, were found dead in a woods near here today with their wrecked plane.

The pair had spanned the ocean successfully despite the bad weather into which they had headed, but came to grief just a few hours from their goal at a spot approximately 4,000 miles from Floyd Bennett field, their starting point.

It was indicated the flyers had crashed from a great height and that both were killed instantly. They were identified by maps, charts, and Lithuanian newspapers found in their plane.

Walter Danzig, acting district governor, told International News Service he had visited the plane about 8:0[illegible] presumably about seve[illegible] hours after the pair had crushed.

MOSCOW, July 17.—Refreshed by food and cold shower, Wiley Post swept east out of Moscow in his monoplane Winnie Mae this afternoon, determined to capture a new round-the-world flight record.

After landing here unexpectedly from Koenigsberg, East Prussia, for a few minor repairs, the intrepid one-eyed American airman, whose ship is being partly guided by a robot, flashed away from the Moscow airport at 2:16 p. m. Greenwich mean time (10:16 a. m. eastern daylight time), about three hours after he had arrived here.

He was bound for Novosibirsk, Siberia, where he plans to stop just long enough for refueling and checking his plane before continuing on to Khabraovsk, where he intends to land before taking further rest.

Post's feat in flying from New York non-stop to Berlin in 25- 3-4 hurs was acclaimed by aviation authorities here, who predicted he should easily beat the record he set round-the world with Harold Gatty two years ago, if his plane held up.

All Utility Rates Here Higher Than Average

Editor's Note—This is the first of a series of articles written by Henry C. Hagloch, experienced newspaperman and investigator engaged by The Circleville Herald to show the true public utility situation in this city. The series is prompted by council's recent decision to engage an engineer to study the advisability of a municipal light plant, and is designed to lay before Circleville taxpayers an array of facts about ALL of the utilities serving this community. The second article will be published in a few days.

BY HENRY C. HAGLOCH
Special Writer for The Herald.

Weary of battling over public utility rates and of almost fruitless appeals to the state utilities commission, Circleville city council has decided to initiate its own survey of the situation here to determine what light and water rates ought to be and the possibility of establishing municipal ownership.

That council is divided 4 to 3 on the question is no indication that all councilmen do not consider rates in Circleville too high. Those opposed to the present survey declare they are not against municipal ownership if it can be shown to be feasible and those voting for the survey say they are not in favor of municipal plants if satisfactory rates can be obtained from the privately-owned utilities.

City Pays High Price For Fire Protection It Does Not Get

But the city owes the Southern Ohio Electric Co. $11,499.45 for street lighting and owes $3,965 for fire hydrant water rental to the Ohio Water Service Co. There are no immediate funds to pay these bills and the appropriation at this time of $2,500 out of the general fund for a survey of water and light costs is questioned by some members of council and some citizens, although enthusiastically upheld by other members of council and other citizens, especially the members of the newly-formed Citizens' League.

Council can later issue bonds for the $2,500 survey ordered but Ohio laws forbid it to issue bonds to pay off the incurred water and light bills.

That all utility rates in Circleville are somewhat above the average in Ohio is evident by comparison.

The Ohio Fuel Gas Co. charges Circleville consumers $1 for the first 500 cubic feet per month or less and 60 cents net for all over that amount. The company's contract expired in 1931. The present rates have been in effect the last three years.

The same company has been charging practically the same rate at Chillicothe for the last two years. The same company has been charging $1.55 for the first 1,000 cubic feet per month at Coshocton and 55 cents per 1,000 cubic feet for all over that amount with a 5 per cent discount if paid by the 10th of the month. The minimum charge is $1. Coshocton, however, is a larger city and the gas company justifies its lower rate by a more productive field which cuts down overhead and service charges.

The recent Ohio supreme court decision establishing 45-cent gas for Columbus after the public utilities commission had set a 55-cent rate, may have its effect on gas prices in this area. The public utilities commission is expected to do something to adjust rates in the territory although this is by no means certain.

The Citizens Telephone Co., said to be controlled from Kansas City, was forced in a recent fight before the utility commission to make slight reductions in rates. A private business line in Circleville which formerly cost $5.25 a month now costs $5, but the same company fur-taken charge of the repeal drive for the purpose of carrying out the Democratic platform pledge. They have been tremendously active in the south in the last few weeks, urging local Democratic leaders to stand by the party platform. The president himself pointed the way with his national appeal for ratification of the repeal amendment.

Merchants have reported noticeable gains in business in the past week in the face of the market's climb.

Some Democratic chieftains were concerned over the prohibition outcome in the south. They feared the solid south would reject repeal and leave the party open to the charge that it was repudiating its campaign pledges and supporting repeal solely to capture votes in the wet east.

To avoid such an outcome, the president issued his appeal for repeal. On top of that, Postmaster General James A. Farley rushed off to the south last week for a wet speaking tour. Publicly and privately he urged Democrats to vote for repeal. He argued the future of the party might be at stake if the south remained dry.

Reports drifting into Washington indicate the administration will win in Alabama and Tennessee and possibly in Arkansas too.

PORTSMOUTH, July 17—Seventeen members of the civilian conservation crops were under arrest today at the camp in Shawnee Forest, Scioto- co, due to a disturbance Saturday night.

Luer's Kidnapers Hunted By Police; O'Connell Case Still Mystery.

ALTON, Ill., July 17.—Departments of justice agents and police today narrowed their search for the kidnapers' hideout where August Luer, 77, Alton banker was held captive five days in a brick dungeon until ransom negotiations were completed.

The aged banker told authorities the lair was within three hours ride by automobile from his home here.

Released yesterday, Luer, after a long rest, revealed that he was kept prisoner in the underground dungeon which was too small to allow him to stand erect. He used a sack stuffed with grass for a pillow and slept on bare bricks.

Members of the banker's family denied emphatically that any ransom was paid, but reports persisted that $10,000 in small bills had been given the abducters to effect Luer's release. It was reported that the victim's youngest son, Carl Luer, pushed the ransom money over a cemetery wall some 20 miles from Alton.

ALBANY, July 17.—While the family of the kidnapers John Jr. O'Connell, Jr., today awaited the long anticipated "break" which would result in the recovery of the missing youth, the state police plugged ahead with their investigation with more vigor than generally had been surmised.

The two men had been sought for a week.

PLAN ATTRACTION AT BUCKEYE LAKE

Buckeye Lake Park, now reached over perfect motor roads, offers three "high spots" of entertainment this coming week. They are appearances of 'Happy Harry' Sinclair, world's highest hot air balloon ascensionist and parachute dropper, and a one-night engagement of the world-famous Paul Tremaine orchestra for dancing.

"Happy Harry" makes two balloon ascensions, the first one was Sunday afternoon and the second on Thursday afternoon, dropping from high above the park in a parachute. The Tremaine band comes for Monday night only. Admittance will be a quarter a person and regular park plan dancing after that at the regular prices. Dancing is in the beautiful Crystal Ball Room, high above the lake, and overlooking the swimming pool.

Lightning Struck Twice

WINDSOR, Conn. — The old adage that "lightning never strikes twice in the same place" was definitely contradicted here a short time ago. During one storm the home of A. C. taken charge of the repeal drive for the purpose of carrying out the Democratic platform pledge. They have been tremendously active in the south in the last few weeks, urging local Democratic leaders to stand by the party platform. The president himself pointed the way with his national appeal for ratification of the repeal amendment.

Some Democratic chieftains were concerned over the prohibition outcome in the south. They feared the solid south would reject repeal and leave the party open to the charge that it was repudiating its campaign pledges and supporting repeal solely to capture votes in the wet east.

To avoid such an outcome, the president issued his appeal for repeal. On top of that, Postmaster General James A. Farley rushed off to the south last week for a wet speaking tour. Publicly and privately he urged Democrats to vote for repeal. He argued the future of the party might be at stake if the south remained dry.

Reports drifting into Washington indicate the administration will win in Alabama and Tennessee and possibly in Arkansas too.

'FOREST' YOUTHS CAUSING TROUBLE

PORTSMOUTH, July 17—Seventeen members of the civilian conservation crops were under arrest today at the camp in Shawnee Forest, Scitoto- co, due to a disturbance Saturday night.

The trouble started when regular army officers assigned to duty at the camp assigned new squad leaders in connection with reorganization plans. Some of the new leaders were said to be opposed by members of the corps.

As a result of the trouble, the camp officers are being permitted to carry arms for the first time since the camp opened.

BANKER FREE; $10,000 PAID

Luer's Kidnapers Hunted By Police; O'Connell Case Still Mystery.

ALTON, Ill., July 17.—Departments of justice agents and police today narrowed their search for the kidnapers' hideout where August Luer, 77, Alton banker was held captive five days in a brick dungeon until ransom negotiations were completed.

The aged banker told authorities the lair was within three hours ride by automobile from his home here.

Released yesterday, Luer, after a long rest, revealed that he was kept prisoner in the underground dungeon which was too small to allow him to stand erect. He used a sack stuffed with grass for a pillow and slept on bare bricks.

Members of the banker's family denied emphatically that any ransom was paid, but reports persisted that $10,000 in small bills had been given the abductors to effect Luer's release. It was reported that the victim's youngest son, Carl Luer, pushed the ransom money over a cemetery wall some 20 miles from Alton.

ALBANY, July 17.—While the family of the kidnapers John J. O'Connell, Jr., today awaited the long anticipated "break" which would result in the recovery of the missing youth, the state police plugged ahead with their investigation with more vigor than generally had been surmised.

CHICAGO, July 17.—Two suspects in the kidnaping of John (Jake the Barber) Factor, wealthy stock promoter, were being held for questioning today by Chicago police. They are Martin O'Leary and Carl Fontana, both of whom have appeared on "public enemy" lists.

The two men had been sought for a week.

FIVE RUMORED FOR DEMOCRATIC CHAIR

COLUMBUS, July 17.—Five of Ohio's most prominent Democrats —William J. Leonard of Cincinnati, Director of Agriculture, Earl Hanefeld, Frank T. Dore of Tiffin, Attorney Garrett Claypool of Chillicothe, and John F. Nolan of Steubenville—were plunged into the spotlight today as prospects to succeed Henry G. Brunner, of Mansfield, as Democratic state chairman.

Word from U. S. Senator Robert J. Bulkley at Washington says Brunner will resign the party leadership if he succeeds in getting appointment as state manager of the home loan administration.

The anouncement threw the Ohio Democratic party into confusion. Brunner had been expectep to retain the party chairmanship.

REPORT NO SALARY

Brunner is head of the party by virtue of his position as chairman of the state executives committee and, according to headquarters, is serving without salary. The home loan managership pays $6,000 yearly.

Director Ranefeld, a resident of Ottawa, Putnam county seat, and a former school teacher, was privately regarder by Democrats here as likely to get the position tentatively, inasmuch as he is already chairman of the Democratic state central committee.

Protest has arisen against Brunner's appointment because of his chairmanship of the Democratic organization, but with that obstacle removed, Senator Buckley was confident Brunner will be named.

Hanefeld, it was said, might hold both chairmanships. It was pointed out that W. W. Durbin, of Kenton, once served as chairman of both committees.

LEONARD STRONG

"Billy" Leonard, the Cincinnatian, was said by others to be a likely choice. He is Democratic leader in Cincinnati.

Dore, the Democratic chief of Seneca-co, is a former state chairman, having served while James M. Cox was governor.

Claypool is a member of both the executive and central committees. Nolan, Jefferson-co leader, formerly was on the executive committee.

APPRAISERS WORK TO AID FARMERS

Immel, Others Go To Northwestern Ohio; Applications Flood Office.

Fifteen appraisers, working under orders from the Federal land bank and the land bank commissioner, swung into action Monday morning at Bowling Green to assist farmers of northwestern Ohio.

A statement from Robert L. Immel, agent land bank commissioner, said the men were being sent there to handle applications for federal farm loans under the emergency farm mortgage act passed May 12. All applications will be handled on the ground without coming through the bank.

Distressed financial conditions in Wood, Henry, Paulding, Putnam and Defiance-cos caused the action.

"It is expected that in this way these counties can have all the applications appraised in a very short time and money will be available from the loans that are approved. This will immediately put new life into many banks and will afford relief to depositors and also to banks, who have farm loans," Mr. Immel said. "This is done in keeping with the thought of the farm credit administration that both the Federal Land Bank at Louisville and the land bank commissioner should render prompt and efficient service and bend every energy to relieve these trouble spots as rapidly as possible.

The appraisal department of Federal Land Bank at Louisville has in the few weeks increased its appraisal force from 15 to over 100 and this will be further increased in a short time so that every application in the four states comprising the fourth federal land bank district (Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee) can be given prompt attention.

"Illustrative of the flood of applications for loans that have come in, the commissioner's agent has received 3,511 applications for loans aggregating over $7,000,000. The federal land bank has received 5,405 applications for $21,242,640. The volume of applications coming into the bank the past week has equalled an ordinary year's business.

Ernest Rice, president of the Federal Land Bank in Louisville, Roged D. Brannigan, chief counsel of the bank, and Mr. Robert L. Immel, agent land bank commissioner, have arranged to be in these counties in order that the applications may have immediate consideration.

Utility Rates Here Higher

nishes private business lines in Ashville, Williamsport and Laurelville for $4 and a desk or cradle phone extension for $4.25 compared with $5.25 in Circleville. A two-party business phone costs $4.75 in Circleville.

A private line residence phone costs $3.25 in Circleville and only $2.70 in Ashville, Williamsport and Laurelville. A two-party residence line costs $2.75, or $3 with a desk extension in Circleville.

A four-party residence line costs $2.25 in Circleville and $2.00 in the three villages served by the company. Williamsport, Ashville and Laurelville also have a 4-party business line rate at $3.50. No 4-party business line is scheduled for Circleville.

Ten-party rural business phones cost $3.75 a month out of Circleville and only $3.50 out of the three villages. Ten-party residence phones cost $2.40 a month out of Circleville and $2.30 a month out of the three villages.

The Ohio Water Service Co. which serves Circleville on a long since expired contract continues to collect water rent under a peculiar schedule which charges the consumer 63 1-3 cents per 1,000 gallons for the first 3,000 gallons per quarter and 40 cents per 1,000 for the remainder used by average consumer under a cleverly phrased clause which reads "for the next 2,500 gallons or less PER DAY, at the rate of 40 cents per 1,000 gallons." Taken at its face value the consumer would have to use more than 2,500 gallons a day for 90 days plus the initial 3,000 gallons, and pay for it at the rate of 63 1-3 cents for 3,000 gallons and 40 cents for the remainder before he got into the 20-cent class. However, there is a clause which says "bills MAY be rendered monthly" where average consumption is over 10,000 gallons a month.

The same company charges $1 for the first 2,000 gallons at Washington Court House, 30 cents for the next 13,000, and 25 cents for the next 15,000, with a 20-cent rate for all over 30,000 gallons per quarter. The minimum is $12.15 and $36 a year, according to size of meter.

The Circleville flat rates are $8 a year for dwelling of not over six rooms, $1 for each additional room, $3 for each bathtub, $2 per bowl for water closets, $1 for each additional spigot, excepting hot water faucets; $1 for private garage or stable, $5 for 50-foot frontage lawn hose sprinkling and 10 cents for each additional foot frontage. A 5 per cent penalty is added if not paid within 10 days after end of the quarter.

At Washington C. H. the flat rate is 50 cents per month for the first two openings, 20 cents for the next and 15 cents for all over three openings.

Circleville gets water for public buildings at a much cheaper rate than that assessed private consumers. The courthouse pays only 15 cents per 1,000 gallons per quarter after the initial payment of $1.90 for the first 3,000 gallons, and the schools and city buildings get their water for 10 cents.

But Circleville pays an enormous price for inadequate fire protection. The city is paying $55 a year for 143 fire hydrants and yet the city has been dropped into the seventh class in insurance rates. There is no water storage and no protection against breaks of the line which runs under the Scioto river from the plant at Darby Creek. Most cities get their fire hydrant protection at $40 a hydrant and are in the third class, while many Ohio cities get free fire hydrant service through municipal water plants.

The above figures would indicate that Circleville is paying a high rate for fire protection it is not getting and that citizens are paying for this condition both in taxes and in higher insurance rates.

The present rate controversy, however, had its origin in protests to domestic and street lighting rates charged by the Southern Ohio Electric Co. The light rates are rather high compared with the majority of districts in the state and full comparisons will be made in later articles. It is a fact, however, that the power company has offered the only reductions in rates of any of the utilities operating in Circleville. The company in June, 1931, reduced a light rate that had been in effect since 1926. That rate had been 9 1-2 cents per kilowatt hour for the first 50 KWH per month, 9 cents for the next 50, eight cents for the next 100, seven cents for the next 200, six cents for the next 300, five cents for the next 300, and four cents for all over 1,000. This rate in 1931 was lowered to 9 cents for the first 50, 6 cents for the next 50 and 4 cents for the next 1,400, for stoves or refrigerators the 6-cent step is eliminated and the charge drops immediately to 4 cents from the 8-cent rate for the first 50 KWH.

The rates now in effect at Chillicothe are 8 cents for the first 50, six cents for the next 50, 4 cents for the next 1,400 and 2 1-2 cents for all over 1,500. There is a penalty of one cent per KWH if bills are not paid by the 10th and the minimum is $1. The 6-cent step is eliminated for stoves and refrigerators.

The Southern Ohio Electric Co. says that Circleville could have been enjoying this rate for some time past and could now have this rate, as well as a reduction in street lighting costs, if council had accepted its offer.

The street lighting contract expired last Dec. 31 but the residence contract has three years to run. The Southern Ohio Electric Co. has offered the reduced residential and street lighting contracts on a five year basis. This council refused to accept and it is this situation that has led up to the present controversy.

The next article, to follow within a few days, will outline this controversy between council and the power company.

GOSS SPEAKS ON FARM LAND LOANS

Successor To Paul Bestor Makes Statement Upon Farm Mortgage Act.

Albert S. Goss who was made Land Bank Commissioner July 1st in the Farm Credit Administration to succeed Paul Bestor, in commenting upon the Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, said:

"Congress determined that loans by the Federal Land Banks should be based upon normal values, thus indicating the intent to preserve the system as a long-term rather than a short-term loan system. It is logical, therefore, that appraisals should not follow the fluctuations of the land market to extremely low or to extremely high levels. In other words, the system should be built upon stability. Nowhere in the Act is there any hint that the System should make unsound loans.

"It is recognized that the funds for Land Bank loans must come from the investing public and loans must be made on a sound basis. All through the Act, however, the purpose is apparent that the utmost service should be rendered in bringing credit relief. Congress provided for reduction in interest rates by the banks, funds for granting extensions to worthy borrowers and, through the banks' and Commissioner's loans, for refinancing farm indebtedness at a low rate of interest and for a longer period than is now granted on most loans which will be replaced. In carrying out the purposes of the Act, every employee of the Farm Loan System is expected to devote his best thought to working out a sound basis upon which loans may be closed, where credit is needed."

Evangelistic Services Being Held Every Evening at Memorial Hall

Yesterday marked the beginning of what promises to be a splendid evangelistic meeting being conducted under the auspices of the Church of Christ of Circleville, R. Tibbs Maxey, minister and J. Marion Small of Van Wert, Ohio, evangelist, and Mr. and Mrs. Owen M. Walker of Muncie, Ind., singer and pianist of national note. The services are being held in the Memorial Hall at Main and Pickaway-sts and begin each night at 8 o'clock.

Special services will be conducted each morning at 9:30 for children. These services take the form of Bible study hours with the added feature of instruction in chorus singing which is given free to all and any children from the ages of 8 to 17 who may wish to come. No advantage will be taken of any child who may come, and no invitations will be given in the children's meetings. Every one who sends a child may feel certain they will be well cared for and the instruction given of the very highest order.

These meetings are just getting started, and those in charge were well pleased to note the attendance last night which was nearly three times what it was at the morning hour. The interest was especially good, the singing spirited and the sermon by Mr. Small on the topic "Christ's Unanswered Prayer," brought a real challenge to all professed followers of Christ and was a plea for a united front as we endeavor to take the world for Christ.

These evangelists while in Circleville are stopping at the home of Earl Kibler, 419 E. Main-st. They desire the prayers and cooperation of all Christian people of the city and have but one purpose and that is to do good and to help others to be good.

You and Your friends are cordially invited to attend any and all of these services. Spirited singing, unusual and attractive piano playing and strong scriptural preaching will be the order at each service.

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

ARTHUR J. NEU, champion fly-caster, says:

"Dry-fly fishing is a delicate art that takes the best a man's got in steadiness of hand and eye. To win the championship in accuracy at casting a dry fly, I had to have healthy nerves. And yet I smoke steadily—all I want to—without disturbing my nerves. That's because I prefer Camels. There is no question but that they are milder. And their rich, inviting flavor seems to say, 'Have another.'"

nishes private business lines in Ashville, Williamsport and Laurelville for $4 and a desk or cradle phone extension for $4.25 compared with $5.25 in Circleville. A two-party business phone costs $4.75 in Circleville.

A private line residence phone costs $3.25 in Circleville and only $2.70 in Ashville, Williamsport and Laurelville. A two-party residence line costs $2.75, or $3 with a desk extension in Circleville.

A four-party residence line costs $2.25 in Circleville and $2.00 in the three villages served by the company. Williamsport, Ashville and Laurelville also have a 4-party business line rate at $3.50. No 4-party business line is scheduled for Circleville.

Ten-party rural business phones cost $3.75 a month out of Circleville and only $3.50 out of the three villages. Ten-party residence phones cost $2.40 a month out of Circleville and $2.30 a month out of the three villages.

The Ohio Water Service Co. which serves Circleville on a long since expired contract continues to collect water rent under a peculiar schedule which charges the consumer 63 1-3 cents per 1,000 gallons for the first 3,000 gallons per quarter and 40 cents per 1,000 for the remainder used by average consumer under a cleverly phrased clause which reads "for the next 2,500 gallons or less PER DAY, at the rate of 40 cents per 1,000 gallons." Taken at its face value the consumer would have to use more than 2,500 gallons a day for 90 days plus the initial 3,000 gallons, and pay for it at the rate of 63 1-3 cents for 3,000 gallons and 40 cents for the remainder before he got into the 20-cent class. However, there is a clause which says "bills MAY be rendered monthly" where average consumption is over 10,000 gallons a month.

The same company charges $1 for the first 2,000 gallons at Washington Court House, 30 cents for the next 13,000, and 25 cents for the next 15,000, with a 20-cent rate for all over 30,000 gallons per quarter. The minimum is $12.15 and $36 a year, according to size of meter.

The Circleville flat rates are $8 a year for dwelling of not over six rooms, $1 for each additional room, $3 for each bathtub, $2 per bowl for water closets, $1 for each additional spigot, excepting hot water faucets; $1 for private garage or stable, $5 for 50-foot frontage lawn hose sprinkling and 10 cents for each additional foot frontage. A 5 per cent penalty is added if not paid within 10 days after end of the quarter.

At Washington C. H. the flat rate is 50 cents per month for the first two openings, 20 cents for the next and 15 cents for all over three openings.

Circleville gets water for public buildings at a much cheaper rate than that assessed private consumers. The courthouse pays only 15 cents per 1,000 gallons per quarter after the initial payment of $1.90 for the first 3,000 gallons, and the schools and city buildings get their water for 10 cents.

But Circleville pays an enormous price for inadequate fire protection. The city is paying $55 a year for 143 fire hydrants and yet the city has been dropped into the seventh class in insurance rates. There is no water storage and no protection against breaks of the line which runs under the Scioto river from the plant at Darby Creek. Most cities get their fire hydrant protection at $40 a hydrant and are in the third class, while many Ohio cities get free fire hydrant service through municipal water plants.

The above figures would indicate that Circleville is paying a high rate for fire protection it is not getting and that citizens are paying for this condition both in taxes and in higher insurance rates.

The present rate controversy, however, had its origin in protests to domestic and street lighting rates charged by the Southern Ohio Electric Co. The light rates are rather high compared with the majority of districts in the state and full comparisons will be made in later articles. It is a fact, however, that the power company has offered the only reductions in rates of any of the utilities operating in Circleville. The company in June, 1931, reduced a light rate that had been in effect since 1926. That rate had been 9 1-2 cents per kilowatt hour for the first 50 KWH per month, 9 cents for the next 50, eight cents for the next 100, seven cents for the next 200, six cents for the next 300, five cents for the next 300, and four cents for all over 1,000. This rate in 1931 was lowered to 9 cents for the first 50, 6 cents for the next 50 and 4 cents for the next 1,400, for stoves or refrigerators the 6-cent step is eliminated and the charge drops immediately to 4 cents from the 8-cent rate for the first 50 KWH.

The rates now in effect at Chillicothe are 8 cents for the first 50, six cents for the next 50, 4 cents for the next 1,400 and 2 1-2 cents for all over 1,500. There is a penalty of one cent per KWH if bills are not paid by the 10th and the minimum is $1. The 6-cent step is eliminated for stoves and refrigerators.

The Southern Ohio Electric Co. says that Circleville could have been enjoying this rate for some time past and could now have this rate, as well as a reduction in street lighting costs, if council had accepted its offer.

The street lighting contract expired last Dec. 31 but the residence contract has three years to run. The Southern Ohio Electric Co. has offered the reduced residential and street lighting contracts on a five year basis. This council refused to accept and it is this situation that has led up to the present controversy.

The next article, to follow within a few days, will outline this controversy between council and the power company.

GOSS SPEAKS ON FARM LAND LOANS

Successor To Paul Bestor Makes Statement Upon Farm Mortgage Act.

Albert S. Goss who was made Land Bank Commissioner July 1st in the Farm Credit Administration to succeed Paul Bestor, in commenting upon the Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, said:

"Congress determined that loans by the Federal Land Banks should be based upon normal values, thus indicating the intent to preserve the system as a long-term rather than a short-term loan system. It is logical, therefore, that appraisals should not follow the fluctuations of the land market to extremely low or to extremely high levels. In other words, the system should be built upon stability. Nowhere in the Act is there any hint that the System should make unsound loans.

"It is recognized that the funds for Land Bank loans must come from the investing public and loans must be made on a sound basis. All through the Act, however, the purpose is apparent that the utmost service should be rendered in bringing credit relief. Congress provided for reduction in interest rates by the banks, funds for granting extensions to worthy borrowers and, through the banks' and Commissioner's loans, for refinancing farm indebtedness at a low rate of interest and for a longer period than is now granted on most loans which will be replaced. In carrying out the purposes of the Act, every employee of the Farm Loan System is expected to devote his best thought to working out a sound basis upon which loans may be closed, where credit is needed."

Evangelistic Services Being Held Every Evening at Memorial Hall

Yesterday marked the beginning of what promises to be a splendid evangelistic meeting being conducted under the auspices of the Church of Christ of Circleville, R. Tibbs Maxey, minister and J. Marion Small of Van Wert, Ohio, evangelist, and Mr. and Mrs. Owen M. Walker of Muncie, Ind., singer and pianist of national note. The services are being held in the Memorial Hall at Main and Pickaway-sts and begin each night at 8 o'clock.

Sepecial services will be conducted each morning at 9:30 for children. These services take the form of Bible study hours with the added feature of instruction in chorus singing which is given free to all and any children from the ages of 8 to 17 who may wish to come. No advantage will be taken of any child who may come, and no invitations will be given in the children's meetings. Every one who sends a child may feel certain they will be well cared for and the instruction given of the very highest order.

These meetings are just getting started, and those in charge were well pleased to note the attendance last night which was nearly three times what it was at the morning hour. The interest was especially good, the singing spirited and the sermon by Mr. Small on the topic "Christ's Unanswered Prayer," brought a real challenge to all professed followers of Christ and was a plea for a united front as we endeavor to take the world for Christ.

These evangelists while in Circleville are stopping at the home of Earl Kibler, 419 E. Main-st. They desire the prayers and cooperation of all Christian people of the city and have but one purpose and that is to do good and to help others to be good.

You and Your friends are cordially invited to attend any and all of these services. Spirited singing, unusual and attractive piano playing and strong scriptural preaching will be the order at each service.

Steady Smokers turn to Camels

ARTHUR J. NEU, champion fly-caster, says:

"Dry-fly fishing is a delicate art that takes the best a man's got in steadiness of hand and eye. To win the championship in accuracy at casting a dry fly, I had to have healthy nerves. And yet I smoke steadily—all I want to—without disturbing my nerves. That's because I prefer Camels. There is no question but that they are milder. And their rich, inviting flavor seems to say, 'Have another.'"

Turn to Camels. Like Mr. Neu you will find that Camels are milder...that their flavor suits your taste . . . that steady smoking never jangles your nerves. So begin today!

IT IS MORE FUN TO KNOW

"MARY FAITH"
by Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Mary Faith, comely young orphan, gives up her position as secretary to the wealthy Mark Nesbit to marry Kimberley Farrell. Kim, a young, shiftless lawyer, lives with his mother. When the latter objects to the marriage, Kim brusquely startles Mary Faith by breaking the engagement. Later, when he sees her with Mark Nesbit in a jewelry store, selecting a ring, his jealousy is aroused. The next morning he appears at Mary Faith's boarding house and overwhelms her with his protestations of love. She again leaves her position and, after a hasty marriage, they spend an ecstatic two weeks' honeymoon in the house of Kim's aunt in the country. Returning home, Mary Faith moves to the Farrell apartment. Kim's friends, Claire and Jack Maldon, find Mary Faith a dull companion for their jazzy parties. Mary Faith realizes Kim is irritated by her failure to drink and gamble. During the winter Kim attends the parties alone. Mary Faith takes care of the house but knows nothing of Kim's finances. When he hints at being pinched for money, Mary Faith accedes to his request for $60. Later, he admits taking that sum from the firm's collections for his own use. The next night, at dinner, he tells Mary Faith he has lost his position. He then persuades her to let him have a thousand dollars to open his own office. Mary Faith, learning that she is to become a mother, joyously visits Kim's office to tell him the good news. She finds him flirting with a girl. Kim is furious. Mary Faith decides not to tell him of the approaching event. Back in the apartment, Kim tells Mary Faith and his mother that he is getting out—that his marriage is a failure. Mary Faith tries to stop him from leaving but he is adamant. "We made a mistake," Kim said. Mary Faith tells Mrs. Farrell that her baby is to be born in January. They decide to stay on in the flat. Without informing Kim, Mary Faith mails $60 to his former employers. Mary Faith looks for work.

CHAPTER XXV

"Of course, Florrie will give you a job," Jean said. "She knows what slick work you do, and she'll be mighty glad to get you. I'll fix it you first thing tomorrow morning. . . . What happened between you and Kim, Mary Faith?"

Mary Faith put her head to one side, thinking. "Well, for one thing he was bored, Jean, and I didn't know it. I didn't mind staying at home nights or going to a picture show with him. As long as he was with me I didn't need anybody else. But he got tired of me, it seems. . . ."

"Tired of you, bah!" cried Jean with infinite scorn in her voice. "He marries the best-looking girl and the nicest girl in this town and gets tired of her in five months! He didn't have sense enough to appreciate you, that's what! I've known you for five years and I've never been bored by you. . . . It's too bad you didn't marry Mark Nesbit, Mary Faith, when you had the chance. And you did have it. Everybody at the office knew that he was absolutely hay-wire over you."

She took a vanity case out of her tan silk bag and powdered her face before she finished what she had to say: "The trouble with Kim Farrell is that he has a heart as big as a hotel. He falls for every girl he meets. . . . I never told you at the time but he even tried to date me up while you were engaged to him; and I was always bumping into him when he was out stepping with other girls. Remember how I used to urge you to marry him before he left you high and dry? . . . What are you going to do now? Divorce him?"

Divorce. . . . The very word was paralyzing to Mary Faith. She stood staring blankly at Jean for a full minute before she answered her.

"Oh, no, I'd never divorce Kim, Jean. What makes you ask me if I would? You've seen him lately with some girl, haven't you?"

"No, I haven't, but he's left you, hasn't he? And, so far as I can make out, he's left you without a cent to bless yourself with. I should think you'd want to be free from a man like that—after the baby comes, of course. It's just possible that, in the course of human events, you might want to marry again sometime, you know. Such things have happened."

"No, I'd never want to marry again. No matter what happens there never will be anybody but Kim for me, Jean—and there's just a chance that he'll come back here to me if he knows that I want him."

Jean's lips, painted the bright red of sealing wax, curled in a smile that was half tenderness and half contempt. She shrugged her shoulders once more.

"I must go," she said. "I have a date with a man from Phoenix, Arizona. Burr sold him a car the other day and brought him out to the house last night to play cards with us. He's a whiz—tall and tanned and blue-eyed. You ought to see him, Mary Faith; and you ought to hear him talk about his ranch down in the Salt River Valley. He grows everything on it, from cantaloupes to cotton. Well, I hope you'll enjoy working for Florrie. I think you will. I'd work for her myself but I don't believe relatives ever get along in business, do you?" And she went away to keep her engagement with the ranchman from Arizona.

On the first Monday in June Mary Faith started work as a stenographer for the Write-O Stenographic Service at twenty-five dollars a week. The office was a big, up-to-date one on the ground floor of the Arcade Building on Spring Street a few blocks away from the Towers Building where Kim had his law office.

The Arcade Building was the largest building in town. It had its own restaurant, its own barber shop and beauty shop its own newsstand and shoe-shining parlor, its own circulating library. It was a little city in itself.

Florrie Bond employed two girls besides Mary Faith, and she herself was busy all day long answering the telephone and making appointments or arrangements for bringing work into the office. She was a pretty, clever-looking girl with black hair and eyes and a tall slender figure She never wore anything but black—lustrous clinging black—and a string of pearls.

"I'm going to let you stay in the office all the time, Mrs. Farrell," she said to Mary Faith when she came to work that first hot June morning. "Sometimes the other girls go out to take dictation or do typing in the other offices of the building. Sometimes they fill in as substitutes when the regular stenographers are ill or on vacation. But Jean tells me that you want to be as quiet as possible."

She gave Mary Faith a desk near the big windows that looked out into the lobby of the building. And there Mary Faith sat eight hours a day, typing lawyers' briefs, manuscripts, letters, anything that came her way.

Once again her days were filled with the click of typewriter keys, the ringing of the telephone, the slam and rattle of filing cabinet drawers, the sound of the downtown traffic outside the front windows of the office.

Every morning she packed her lunch in the cool breezy kitchen of the flat—usually two tomato sandwiches and a thermos bottle of the coffee that was left over from breakfast. She ate it, sitting at her desk, with a book from the library lying open on her typewriter before her.

Every night she walked part of the way home, because Dr. Thatcher had told her that she ought to take plenty of exercise. She and Kim's mother would get supper together, and afterward, when the dishes were done they would stroll around Haltnorth Park or go to the moving picture theater, a block from home.

"For a couple of deserted women we get along very well, don't we?" Mary Faith sometimes asked cheerfully when they were walking along side by side through the warm breathing darkness of the summer night. "I wonder what Kim would think if he knew that we were still living in the flat."

They never heard from him.

"That's because we've had the telephone taken out," Mrs. Farrell decided. "He's probably tried to call our number, and because he can't get it he undoubtedly thinks we've moved out."

"He could find out by telephoning Aunt Ella or Mrs. Puckett," Mary Faith reminded her. "We'll hear from him pretty soon. Certainly he'll begin to wonder where you are and whether you're all right or not."

But the June roses withered and died in Haltnorth Park, and July came in bringing with it midsummer heat that was like the breath of a blast furnace, and still they did not hear from Kim.

One night they came home from the picture show and found him sitting in his roadster in the street outside the apartment.

When he saw them he got out of it and came across the sidewalk to them. In the fan of light from the vestibule he looked very big and handsome in a pale gray suit that Mary Faith had never seen before. At first she thought he had come back to her and her knees turned to water and her heart beat like a trip-hammer.

"Why, Kim!" she said simply.

"I want to talk to you, Mary Faith." He gave her a cold level look from his gray eyes, and turned to his mother. "How are you, Mother, and what are you doing here? Until tonight I thought you were safe and sound in Garrettsville with Aunt Ella."

"No, I'm safe and sound right here where I belong," said his mother. "Mary Faith and I thought we'd be more comfortable here, so after you left we stayed on."

"How do you manage it?" He followed them into the flat and waited while they turned on the lights in the little sitting room. Then he sat down on the arm of the Turkish leather rocker just inside the door, balancing his gray hat on one knee.

It was Mary Faith who answered him. "I got a job, Kim," she said, "and we cut down expenses here. We had the telephone taken out and we stopped eating meat and doing a lot of other little things that meant spending money. We get along very nicely, don't we, Mrs. Farrell.

"We certainly do. We may not have all the luxuries of life," admitted Kim's mother, "but at least we're not accepting charity from anybody, and we're not stuck in a boarding house or a miserable country town. . . ."

Kim wasn't listening to her. His eyes were on Mary Faith's face.

"Did you send sixty dollars to McIntrae and Westover about a month ago?" he asked her.

"I did, Kim. I knew that you wanted to send it yourself, in all probability, but that you were too stiff-necked ever to do it, and so I sent it for you. Why do you want to know about it, Kim? Have you heard from Mr. McIntrae?"

He nodded his blond and hand some head. "He sent for me last Friday," he said. "He told me that he admired the spirit that prompted me to return that money, and pulled a lot of that sort of talk on me. I didn't know what he was driving at but I had brains enough to keep my mouth shut. He told me he thought I'd learned my lesson, and then he told me I could come back to work for him if I wanted to."

"And did you?"

"Of course. I was starving to death down there in the Towers Building. If I hadn't gone back to him I'd have had to get a job somewhere else. . . . For a week I've been wondering about that money, and tonight it occurred to me that you might have sent it to him. I knew that you and Jack Maldon were the only two people who knew that I never had turned it in at the office. I telephoned Mrs. Puckett's but she told me that she hadn't seen you in weeks. So I came around here."

AT THE GRAND

The cold steel bars of a prison cell acted as the walls of a make-shift dressing room for Mae Clarke on the Columbia lot during the filming of "Parole Girl" which comes to the Grand Theater, on Wednesday next.

The star refused to hold up the company by waiting for her dressing room to be set up and the cell, at her request was transformed into a make-up parlor by the placing of a canvas screen around it.

"Parole Girl," concerns the adventures of a young girl who finds the label, Parole Girl," a real millstone around her neck in her ardent attempt to again pick up the straight and narrow path from which she unwittingly slipped. Ralph Bellamy, Marie Prevost and Hale Hamilton are also featured in the production.

AT THE CLIFTONA

An overpowering desire to see how the other half of the world lives, to see what is across the garden wall, led Richard Halliburton, world famous author of romantic travel books, to leave his class at Princeton and sail before the mast for a year and a half.

This was nearly ten years ago, when Halliburton, then a sophmore at Princeton, was imbued with the idea of writing a metered Odyssey.

Today Halliburton has decided that the publishers were right, that his poetry was really pretty bad but that his adventures, when recorded in his own romantic style, make most interesting reading.

Proof of this lies in the fact that his first book, "The Royal Road to Romance," has sold more than a million copies and has been translated into fifteen foreign tongues. His later books, "New Worlds to Conquer," "The Glorious Adventure," "The Flying Carpet," are also making records in the non-fiction field.

Not satisfied with this success, however, Halliburton has now turned motion picture actor, his first starring vehicle being "India Speaks,' which comes to the Cliftona Theater Tuesday.

Value of Liver Diet In Pernicious Anemia

Its Use Assures Complete Recovery to Most Sufferers From This Once Fatal Disorder

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

AT ONE time pernicious anemia was a dreaded affliction. You know how cancer is feared. I am sure many of you will be surprised to learn that not so long ago pernicious anemia was a disease as greatly feared as cancer is now.

Dr. Copeland

For many years experimental research endeavored to discover a vaccine or serum that would cure pernicious anemia, or retard the progress of this ailment. Until the value of the liver diet was discovered, pernicious anemia was a rapid and fatal disease. Today, liver extracts are prepared in several different forms. They are administered to sufferers from this disease with great success. Those who in former years would be doomed to an inevitable fate are now entirely cured.

The Symptoms

Pernicious anemia is a blood disorder that is often confused with other ailments of the blood. Merely because a person is pale and "anemic looking" does not mean he is a sufferer from pernicious anemia.

You have often heard the expression, "he is so anemic looking". Many a mother takes her child to the doctor and says, "Johnny is anemic, please prescribe some medicine to give him a better color."

It is true that the anemic patient is pale, but he usually has other symptoms that must not be overlooked. He complains of poor appetite, faulty digestion and shortness of breath upon the slightest exertion. As a rule the victim of this disease tires quickly and has no "pep" or vitality.

In addition to these symptoms, he has headache, nausea, vomiting and spells of dizziness. What is most confusing is that the patient seems to recover suddenly from these attacks and for a period of time is in excellent health. Unfortunately, this improved state of health is temporary and within a short time it is followed by a relapse. As time goes on the relapses are more frequent and the periods of good health shortened.

The diagnosis of this affliction is easily made and confirmed by the physician. He resorts to the taking of a blood count in all suspected cases. Though the cause of pernicious anemia is not known, the profound effects of this disease are strikingly shown by an examination of the blood. In this examination an estimation is made of the number of red blood cells and of the amount of "hemoglobin," or coloring matter of the blood.

In pernicious anemia there is a marked decrease in the number of red blood cells and a loss of hemoglobin. In addition, the red blood cells are imperfectly constructed and have poor color. When these characteristic signs are found in a blood examination, the diagnosis of pernicious anemia is confirmed.

Fortunately, as I have stated, this disease can now be cured. It should never be neglected and proper measures should be taken at once.

Job-Seekers Warned

REVIVING business activities are likely to cause many persons to "hit the road" seeking employment.

Work naturally becomes available in some communities before it does in others. It should be remembered, however, that virtually every community has its own large numbers of unemployed. The latter are on the ground. When any new jobs are thrown open, they will get them.

There are thousands of college and high school graduates now seeking work. If it is not immediately available in their home towns, many of them will seek it in other towns and cities. New York, with its glamour of wealth, is likely to become the goal of many. This possibility has caused the New York welfare council to issue a warning against this course.

"Unless you have friends or relatives here, an assured job or money enough to last a year, don't come to New York," it says.

The metropolis already is filled with thousands of idle men and women.

The New York warning is not applicable alone to that city. It should have a general application. The man wanting a job now would do well to remain in his own community, unless he has a definite promise or prospects in another town. Business generally is picking up, and eventually, it is to be hoped, the improvement will extend to all communities, when plenty of jobs will be available.

Until then, aimless wandering in search of work will continue to be a hazardous undertaking.

Flood - Ridden China -

CHINA again is engaged in battling one of its ancient enemies.

Millions of lives are endangered by waters of the Hwang and the Yangtse rivers which have left their banks and are inundating cities and countryside. Crowds pack the temples to pray and burn incense, and in some places Buddas are hauled through the streets to permit those unable to enter the temples to intercede for preservation from the rising waters.

Flood and famine long have preyed at irregular intervals on this unhappy country. It is almost a rare occurrence for the people not to be fighting one or the other of these or seeking to check foreign aggression.

The number of lives lost in floods and famines runs high into the millions. Dykes have been constructed along the streams given to overflowing their banks with disastrous results, but neither these nor their gods have saved people from fresh outbreaks. Greater engineering skill than that yet brought to bear upon the problem might prove effective in conquering the flood peril, but this remains to be tried. The people seem satisfied to place their trust in dykes and prayers.

If the country ever becomes united under a stable government, flood-control probably will be tackled as the major domestic problem. It is not to be believed that the Chinese will be content forever to remain in peril of untamed rivers.

"MARY FAITH"
by Beatrice Burton

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Mary Faith, comely young orphan, gives up her position as secretary to the wealthy Mark Nesbit to marry Kimberley Farrell. Kim, a young, shiftless lawyer, lives with his mother. When the latter objects to the marriage, Kim brusquely startles Mary Faith by breaking the engagement. Later, when he sees her with Mark Nesbit in a jewelry store, selecting a ring, his jealousy is aroused. The next morning he appears at Mary Faith's boarding house and overwhelms her with his protestations of love. She again leaves her position and, after a hasty marriage, they spend an ecstatic two weeks' honeymoon in the house of Kim's aunt in the country. Returning home, Mary Faith moves to the Farrell apartment. Kim's friends, Claire and Jack Maldon, find Mary Faith a dull companion for their jazzy parties. Mary Faith realizes Kim is irritated by her failure to drink and gamble. During the winter Kim attends the parties alone. Mary Faith takes care of the house but knows nothing of Kim's finances. When he hints at being pinched for money, Mary Faith accedes to his request for $60. Later, he admits taking that sum from the firm's collections for his own use. The next night, at dinner, he tells Mary Faith he has lost his position. He then persuades her to let him have a thousand dollars to open his own office. Mary Faith, learning that she is to become a mother, joyously visits Kim's office to tell him the good news. She finds him flirting with a girl. Kim is furious. Mary Faith decides not to tell him of the approaching event. Back in the apartment, Kim tells Mary Faith and his mother that he is getting out—that his marriage is a failure. Mary Faith tries to stop him from leaving but he is adamant. "We made a mistake," Kim said. Mary Faith tells Mrs. Farrell that her baby is to be born in January. They decide to stay on in the flat. Without informing Kim, Mary Faith mails $60 to his former employers. Mary Faith looks for work.

CHAPTER XXV

"Of course, Florrie will give you a job," Jean said. "She knows what slick work you do, and she'll be mighty glad to get you. I'll fix it you first thing tomorrow morning. . . . What happened between you and Kim, Mary Faith?"

Mary Faith put her head to one side, thinking. "Well, for one thing he was bored, Jean, and I didn't know it. I didn't mind staying at home nights or going to a picture show with him. As long as he was with me I didn't need anybody else. But he got tired of me, it seems. . . ."

"Tired of you, bah!" cried Jean with infinite scorn in her voice. "He marries the best-looking girl and the nicest girl in this town and gets tired of her in five months! He didn't have sense enough to appreciate you, that's what! I've known you for five years and I've never been bored by you. . . . It's too bad you didn't marry Mark Nesbit, Mary Faith, when you had the chance. And you did have it. Everybody at the office knew that he was absolutely hay-wire over you."

She took a vanity case out of her tan silk bag and powdered her face before she finished what she had to say: "The trouble with Kim Farrell is that he has a heart as big as a hotel. He falls for every girl he meets. . . . I never told you at the time but he even tried to date me up while you were engaged to him; and I was always bumping into him when he was out stepping with other girls. Remember how I used to urge you to marry him before he left you high and dry? . . . What are you going to do now? Divorce him?"

Divorce. . . . The very word was paralyzing to Mary Faith. She stood staring blankly at Jean for a full minute before she answered her.

"Oh, no, I'd never divorce Kim, Jean. What makes you ask me if I would? You've seen him lately with some girl, haven't you?"

"No, I haven't, but he's left you, hasn't he? And, so far as I can make out, he's left you without a cent to bless yourself with. I should think you'd want to be free from a man like that—after the baby comes, of course. It's just possible that, in the course of human events, you might want to marry again sometime, you know. Such things have happened."

"No, I'd never want to marry again. No matter what happens there never will be anybody but Kim for me, Jean—and there's just a chance that he'll come back here to me if he knows that I want him."

Jean's lips, painted the bright red of sealing wax, curled in a smile that was half tenderness and half contempt. She shrugged her shoulders once more.

"I must go," she said. "I have a date with a man from Phoenix, Arizona. Burr sold him a car the other day and brought him out to the house last night to play cards with us. He's a whiz—tall and tanned and blue-eyed. You ought to see him, Mary Faith; and you ought to hear him talk about his ranch down in the Salt River Valley. He grows everything on it, from cantaloupes to cotton. Well, I hope you'll enjoy working for Florrie. I think you will. I'd work for her myself but I don't believe relatives ever get along in business, do you?" And she went away to keep her engagement with the ranchman from Arizona.

On the first Monday in June Mary Faith started work as a stenographer for the Write-O Stenographic Service at twenty-five dollars a week. The office was a big, up-to-date one on the ground floor of the Arcade Building on Spring Street a few blocks away from the Towers Building where Kim had his law office.

The Arcade Building was the largest building in town. It had its own restaurant, its own barber shop and beauty shop its own newsstand and shoe-shining parlor, its own circulating library. It was a little city in itself.

Florrie Bond employed two girls besides Mary Faith, and she herself was busy all day long answering the telephone and making appointments or arrangements for bringing work into the office. She was a pretty, clever-looking girl with black hair and eyes and a tall slender figure She never wore anything but black—lustrous clinging black—and a string of pearls.

"I'm going to let you stay in the office all the time, Mrs. Farrell," she said to Mary Faith when she came to work that first hot June morning. "Sometimes the other girls go out to take dictation or do typing in the other offices of the building. Sometimes they fill in as substitutes when the regular stenographers are ill or on vacation. But Jean tells me that you want to be as quiet as possible."

She gave Mary Faith a desk near the big windows that looked out into the lobby of the building. And there Mary Faith sat eight hours a day, typing lawyers' briefs, manuscripts, letters, anything that came her way.

Once again her days were filled wtih the click of typewriter keys, the ringing of the telephone, the slam and rattle of filing cabinet drawers, the sound of the downtown traffic outside the front windows of the office.

Every morning she packed her lunch in the cool breezy kitchen of the flat—usually two tomato sandwiches and a thermos bottle of the coffee that was left over from breakfast. She ate it, sitting at her desk, with a book from the library lying open on her typewriter before her.

Every night she walked part of the way home, because Dr. Thatcher had told her that she ought to take plenty of exercise. She and Kim's mother would get supper together, and afterward, when the dishes were done they would stroll around Haltnorth Park or go to the moving picture theater, a block from home.

"For a couple of deserted women we get along very well, don't we?" Mary Faith sometimes asked cheerfully when they were walking along side by side through the warm breathing darkness of the summer night. "I wonder what Kim would think if he knew that we were still living in the flat."

They never heard from him.

"That's because we've had the telephone taken out," Mrs. Farrell decided. "He's probably tried to call our number, and because he can't get it he undoubtedly thinks we've moved out."

"He could find out by telephoning Aunt Ella or Mrs. Puckett," Mary Faith reminded her. "We'll hear from him pretty soon. Certainly he'll begin to wonder where you are and whether you're all right or not."

But the June roses withered and died in Haltnorth Park, and July came in bringing with it midsummer heat that was like the breath of a blast furnace, and still they did not hear from Kim.

One night they came home from the picture show and found him sitting in his roadster in the street outside the apartment.

When he saw them he got out of it and came across the sidewalk to them. In the fan of light from the vestibule he looked very big and handsome in a pale gray suit that Mary Faith had never seen before. At first she thought he had come back to her and her knees turned to water and her heart beat like a trip-hammer.

"Why, Kim!" she said simply.

"I want to talk to you, Mary Faith." He gave her a cold level look from his gray eyes, and turned to his mother. "How are you, Mother, and what are you doing here? Until tonight I thought you were safe and sound in Garrettsville with Aunt Ella."

"No, I'm safe and sound right here where I belong," said his mother. "Mary Faith and I thought we'd be more comfortable here, so after you left we stayed on."

"How do you manage it?" He followed them into the flat and waited while they turned on the lights in the little sitting room. Then he sat down on the arm of the Turkish leather rocker just inside the door, balancing his gray hat on one knee.

It was Mary Faith who answered him. "I got a job, Kim," she said, "and we cut down expenses here. We had the telephone taken out and we stopped eating meat and doing a lot of other little things that meant spending money. We get along very nicely, don't we, Mrs. Farrell.

"We certainly do. We may not have all the luxuries of life," admitted Kim's mother, "but at least we're not accepting charity from anybody, and we're not stuck in a boarding house or a miserable country town. . . ."

Kim wasn't listening to her. His eyes were on Mary Faith's face.

"Did you send sixty dollars to McIntrae and Westover about a month ago?" he asked her.

"I did, Kim. I knew that you wanted to send it yourself, in all probability, but that you were too stiff-necked ever to do it, and so I sent it for you. Why do you want to know about it, Kim? Have you heard from Mr. McIntrae?"

He nodded his blond and hand some head. "He sent for me last Friday," he said. "He told me that he admired the spirit that prompted me to return that money, and pulled a lot of that sort of talk on me. I didn't know what he was driving at but I had brains enough to keep my mouth shut. He told me he thought I'd learned my lesson, and then he told me I could come back to work for him if I wanted to."

"And did you?"

"Of course. I was starving to death down there in the Towers Building. If I hadn't gone back to him I'd have had to get a job somewhere else. . . . For a week I've been wondering about that money, and tonight it occurred to me that you might have sent it to him. I knew that you and Jack Maldon were the only two people who knew that I never had turned it in at the office. I telephoned Mrs. Puckett's but she told me that she hadn't seen you in weeks. So I came around here."

AT THE GRAND

The cold steel bars of a prison cell acted as the walls of a makeshift dressing room for Mae Clarke on the Columbia lot during the filming of "Parole Girl" which comes to the Grand Theater, on Wednesday next.

The star refused to hold up the company by waiting for her dressing room to be set up and the cell, at her request was transformed into a make-up parlor by the placing of a canvas screen around it.

"Parole Girl," concerns the adventures of a young girl who finds the label, Parole Girl," a real millstone around her neck in her ardent attempt to again pick up the straight and narrow path from which she unwittingly slipped. Ralph Bellamy, Marie Prevost and Hale Hamilton are also featured in the production.

AT THE CLIFTONA

An overpowering desire to see how the other half of the world lives, to see what is across the garden wall, led Richard Halliburton, world famous author of romantic travel books, to leave his class at Princeton and sail before the mast for a year and a half.

This was nearly ten years ago, when Halliburton, then a sophmore at Princeton, was imbued with the idea of writing a metered Odyssey.

Today Halliburton has decided that the publishers were right, that his poetry was really pretty bad but that his adventures, when recorded in his own romantic style, make most interesting reading.

Proof of this lies in the fact that his first book, "The Royal Road to Romance," has sold more than a million copies and has been translated into fifteen foreign tongues. His later books, "New Worlds to Conquer," "The Glorious Adventure," "The Flying Carpet," are also making records in the non-fiction field.

Not satisfied with this success, however, Halliburton has now turned motion picture actor, his first starring vehicle being "India Speaks,' which comes to the Cliftona Theater Tuesday.

Value of Liver Diet In Pernicious Anemia

Its Use Assures Complete Recovery to Most Sufferers From This Once Fatal Disorder

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

AT ONE time pernicious anemia was a dreaded affliction. You know how cancer is feared. I am sure many of you will be surprised to learn that not so long ago pernicious anemia was a disease as greatly feared as cancer is now.

For many years experimental research endeavored to discover a vaccine or serum that would cure pernicious anemia, or retard the progress of this ailment. Until the value of the liver diet was discovered, pernicious anemia was a rapid and fatal disease. Today, liver extracts are prepared in several different forms. They are administered to sufferers from this disease with great success. Those who in former years would be doomed to an inevitable fate are now entirely cured.

The Symptoms

Pernicious anemia is a blood disorder that is often confused with other ailments of the blood. Merely because a person is pale and "anemic looking" does not mean he is a sufferer from pernicious anemia.

You have often heard the expression, "he is so anemic looking". Many a mother takes her child to the doctor and says, "Johnny is anemic, please prescribe some medicine to give him a better color."

It is true that the anemic patient is pale, but he usually has other symptoms that must not be overlooked. He complains of poor appetite, faulty digestion and shortness of breath upon the slightest exertion. As a rule the victim of this disease tires quickly and has no "pep" or vitality.

In addition to these symptoms, he has headache, nausea, vomiting and spells of dizziness. What is most confusing is that the patient seems to recover suddenly from these attacks and for a period of time is in excellent health. Unfortunately, this improved state of health is temporary and within a short time it is followed by a relapse. As time goes on the relapses are more frequent and the periods of good health shortened.

The diagnosis of this affliction is easily made and confirmed by the physician. He resorts to the taking of a blood count in all suspected cases. Though the cause of pernicious anemia is not known, the profound effects of this disease are strikingly shown by an examination of the blood. In this examination an estimation is made of the number of red blood cells and of the amount of "hemoglobin," or coloring matter of the blood.

In pernicious anemia there is a marked decrease in the number of red blood cells and a loss of hemoglobin. In addition, the red blood cells are imperfectly constructed and have poor color. When these characteristic signs are found in a blood examination, the diagnosis of pernicious anemia is confirmed.

Fortunately, as I have stated, this disease can now be cured. It should never be neglected and proper measures should be taken at once.

WHAT the STARS SAY

FOR WEEK OF JULY 16.
By R. FREDRIC KANE

The best fishing days for the week according to the way it looks to the astrologer, are Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Don't forget that the New Moon is on Friday and that's the day to start anything new.

Nothing of importance on Monday.

Tuesday, July 18.—This is a good day to write letters, sign important papers or deal with those in literary work and also a good day to go on a short journey.

Wednesday, July 19.—Good day to make changes or removals. This day should be noted for some great humanitarian work.

Thursday, July 20.—Do not start on any kind of journey on this day if it is at all possible to put it off. If you do you may find that you will be annoyed by all small mishaps. Also beware of accidents. Drive carefully and watch the other fellow too. Avoid all disputes and arguments on this day. Control your temper. This applies especially to those born in the sign Scorpio. The adverse planetary influences give way to good influences in the late afternoon.

Friday, July 21.—The evening will be a good time to attend important and all kinds of social functions.

Saturday, July 22.—Another bad day to start on an extended trip. Better put it off until the late hours or still better, the next day if possible. Beware of trouble with old friends. Act strictly along conventional lines for the day.

The entire week will be one which will be remembered especially by those whose birthdays fall on the following dates: February 2, 3, 27; April 17; August 6 7; September 1 and October 21. Some good opportunities should come to those born September 13 or 14. Make the most of them.

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

WHEN a fellow is having smooth sailing there ain't much advantage coming to him for being a good citizen. Folks just naturally expect it of him. But if he gets down and out or gets into a mess, it kinda helps a lot if he's had a good record.

Well, there was a guy that had a pretty hard reputation in his town. He wasn't in the habit of paying his debts or anybody else's if he could help it. But when hard luck hit him a cop got lots of fun out of putting him in the hoosegow. The guy sent for a neighbor of his and asked him to put up bail.

"Well, Mr. Heeps," says the neighbor, "I remember I tried to borrow a thousand dollars of you once when my wife was sick and I needed some ready cash right quick."

"Yes, and I offered to lend it to you, didn't I? With proper security, I'd let you have it."

"I remember. Well, I'll do as much for you. With proper security, I can put up bail for you. You're a safe risk, with proper security."

"Well, what kind of security do you think is proper for me?"

"In this case," says the neighbor, "I think I'll recommend handcuffs, an Oregon boot, a little stronger cell, and a guard outside the door day and night. That's the proper security for you."

the middle of the woods, cracking trees right and left.

"The ship must have crashed from a height of at least 1,000 meters (about 3,200 feet).

"I found their log book with details of their flight from Chicago to New York inscribed in it, and also their flight from New York to Kaunas.

"There also were Chicago Lithuanian papers which convinced me of their identity, but neither I nor a constable with me touched the bodies, because this is strictly prohibited.

"We left everything untouched and motored back to Soldin, where we informed the police prosecutor. The case is in his hands now."

The Lithuanians were last sighted over Berlinchen, a suburb of Soldin, shortly after midnight, therefore it was presumed they crashed about 1.00 a. m. At the time they were flying extremely low, lighting up a local factory with their powerful searchlight.

The plane swept a big clearing among the pines of the woods, called "the City Forest," indicating it must have crashed with terrific force.

SHIP WRECKED

The ship was a complete wreck. The motor and propeller were thrown a considerable distance and debris was strewn far and wide.

The board meadow, lying but a short distance away from the wreck, was mute evidence that the two flyers probably had come within a few yards of saving their lives in a landing there.

The body of one of the men was crammed into the cockpit, while that of the other lay beside the wrecked ship, a flashlight still burning in his pocket.

The wreck was first discovered at about 5:00 o'clock this morning (midnight E. D. T.) by a peasant woman picking berries. It lay about four miles south of the city. News of the tragedy traveled slowly, however, until officials were notified later in the day.

Danzig said he could discover no sign of a cause of the wreck unless it was lack of fuel.

"There were no signs of burning or an explosion," he said, "otherwise the trees would have caught fire.

"A farmer nearby told me he heard a loud crash about 1.00 a. m., but he paid no attention to it, believing it was the explosion of an auto tire."

Should The Children EAT IT?

PARENTS, particularly mothers, are paying a lot of attention to children's diet these days. For it is far more economical and pleasant to keep a child well by feeding him correctly than by nursing and doctoring him back to health.

Of course in case of doubt the doctor should be consulted regarding what a child should eat and what he should not eat. But do you realize that the leading manufacturers of food now seek the advice and approval of the leading nutritional authorities in the country, relative to the claims they make for their products in their advertising?

In other words, food advertisements are reliable sources of information regarding diet. They are based upon the results of the latest approved scientific discoveries about vitamins, minerals and roughage, in relation to vigorous bodies, clear complexions, sound teeth and properly regulated systems.

So read these advertisements carefully. Consult your doctor about them. Very often the advertiser invites you to do this because he has asked authorities, whom your doctor respects, about statements made in those advertisements.

"The ship must have crashed from a height of at least 1,000 meters (about 3,200 feet).

"I found their log book with details of their flight from Chicago to New York inscribed in it, and also their flight from New York to Kaunas.

"There also were Chicago Lithuanian papers which convinced me of their identity, but neither I nor a constable with me touched the bodies, because this is strickly prohibited.

"We left everything untouched and motored back to Soldin, where we informed the police prosecutor. The case is in his hands now."

The Lithuanians were last sighted over Berlinchen, a suburb of Soldin, shortly after midnight, therefore it was presumed they crashed about 1.00 a. m. At the time they were flying extremely low, lighting up a local factory with their powerful searchlight.

The plane swept a big clearing among the pines of the woods, called "the City Forest," indicating it must have crashed with terrific force.

SHIP WRECKED

The ship was a complete wreck. The motor and propeller were thrown a considerable distance and debris was strewn far and wide.

The board meadow, lying but a short distance away from the wreck, was mute evidence that the two flyers probably had come within a few yards of saving their lives in a landing there.

The body of one of the men was crammed into the cockpit, while that of the other lay beside the wrecked ship, a flashlight still burning in his pocket.

The wreck was first discovered at about 5:00 o'clock this morning (midnight E. D. T.) by a peasant woman picking berries. It lay about four miles south of the city. News of the tragedy traveled slowly, however, until officials were notified later in the day.

Danzig said he could discover no sign of a cause of the wreck unless it was lack of fuel.

"There were no signs of burning or an explosion," he said, "otherwise the trees would have caught fire.

"A farmer nearby told me he heard a loud crash about 1.00 a. m., but he paid no attention to it, believing it was the explosion of an auto tire."

Should The Children EAT IT?

PARENTS, particularly mothers, are paying a lot of attention to children's diet these days. For it is far more economical and pleasant to keep a child well by feeding him correctly than by nursing and doctoring him back to health.

Of course in case of doubt the doctor should be consulted regarding what a child should eat and what he should not eat. But do you realize that the leading manufacturers of food now seek the advice and approval of the leading nutritional authorities in the country, relative to the claims they make for their products in their advertising?

In other words, food advertisements are reliable sources of information regarding diet. They are based upon the results of the latest approved scientific discoveries about vitamins, minerals and roughage, in relation to vigorous bodies, clear complexions, sound teeth and properly regulated systems.

So read these advertisements carefully. Consult your doctor about them. Very often the advertiser invites you to do this because he has asked authorities, whom your doctor respects, about statements made in those advertisements.
